

What is Low-Level Light Therapy?

Originally researched and developed by NASA, low-level light therapy, also known as photobiomodulation, is the application of light energy to the body to obtain therapeutic benefits. It produces a natural photobiocchemical reaction similar to the process of plant photosynthesis, and has a wide range of beneficial applications across many medical fields, including the treatment of skin, muscle, joint and pain conditions.

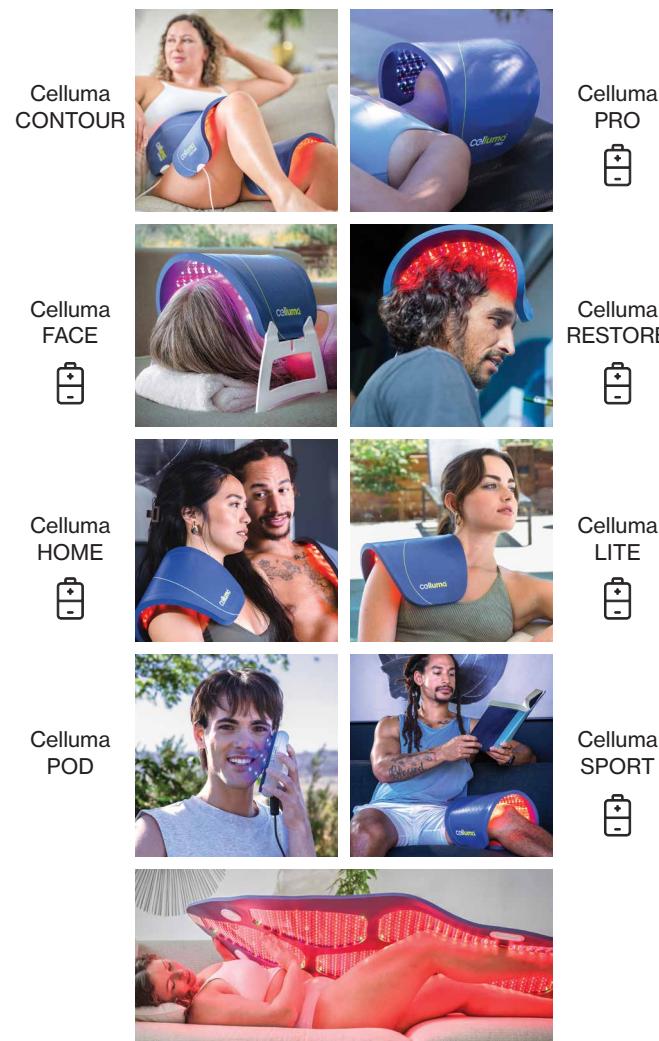

How does Light Therapy work?

Celluma provides compromised cells with the energy to regain and restore vitality naturally. Its powerful, deeply penetrating wavelengths are absorbed by photoacceptors in the mitochondria. This process increases the production of adenosine triphosphate (ATP) – the fuel that drives all cells. This boost of cellular energy results in a cascade of metabolic events leading to an increase in micro-circulation, tissue repair, and a decrease in inflammation and pain.
